Outsourcing

In today's climate of changing market, flexibility is often the key to survival. Business strategies, strategic goals, and execution must often change with the playing field. For most IT departments, the challenges are especially steep, as they transition from years of rapid technology adoption and professional talent shortages to a time of rationalization and consolidation. In many cases, the need for change comes to a head when the organization must evolve from legacy environments to e-business.

For many organizations, the solution is Outsourcing. Years of uncontrolled growth and organizational change can cause IT operations to lose focus. Local IT groups organized for rapid implementation of new business unit-level initiatives during the growth years end up with overlapping, often-incompatible systems, and conflicting priorities once the organization no longer prioritizes new speed to market initiatives. In these situations, incremental project-based approaches usually will not work.

Outsourcing applies a highly disciplined approach to refocusing IT operations to align with the business and reposition the organization for competitive advantage. It is designed to enable change.

caliberIT's Outsourcing programs are built on years of experience helping organizations rationalize their technology strategies. We are skilled in the processes of helping IT organizations assess their application and technology portfolios and internal processes, select technology strategies, conduct tactical and long-range planning, manage change, and conduct knowledge transfer. After implementation, we can manage all production support, new development, enhance existing systems, organize technology and business domain knowledge, and provide the support for automating new business processes.

caliberIT delivers results. For instance, staff at caliberIT has helped organizations:

- Document and consolidate the IT environment
- Enhance and upgrade legacy systems
- Centralize application support
- Accelerate new technology implementation
- Create a web-based knowledge management system
- Reduce development and support costs
- Improve system stability
- Implement corporate internet security

caliberIT can help your organization not only save money but also improve operational efficiencies and regain control over your IT destiny. Contact us for more information.
